wife left behind moped for a day and a night. He looked at the star . He wept bitter tears. He would have taken to poetry, but his words were too profane for verse as sacred as his grief.

Relief came in an unexpected way. The wife took most of the furniture with her. Next day she sent a teamster for the family cows. Then up rose the injured husband in his wrath. The teamster arose also, but it was in order to fice and save himself from a thrashing. "She can bave the farniture, but she don't get the cows." So swore roundly the deserted tiller of the soil. And the tide of his grief was stayed. He is now simp y the maddest ex-husband in all that county.

THE PASSING OF THE LYMPH.

The Koch lymph is heard from again at last. One of the first Americans treated at Berlin comes home to say he believes the stuff has killed him. "They have killed them off by hundreds over there," declares this returned patient, who is Dr. PAINTER, of Pittsburg. The doctor also says that Prof. Vincnow, who has performed hundreds of autopsies in lymph cases, has established the fact that instead of working as a cure the lymph will actually transfer tuberculosis, and that an analysis of it will disclose the presence of bacteria.

Nearly all the German physicians of reputation and skill have discarded the lymph, according to Dr. Painter, and its fate seems to be settled. So perishes another sweet hope of the consumptive.

What a rattling candidate the Kaiser would make for the People's party over here in 1892! Yesterday backed up by only five hours' sleep, he listened to innumerable addresses from as many delegations, answered them all courteously, galloped twice in Rotten Row and attended a lawn party at Marlborough House. Nothing effete about this mouarch.

Bloodshed was prevented, and bonds to keep the peace now control the too anxious lover.

Tales unfolded in the divorce court are always pitiful. More than ever so when the exposure of trouble between a husband and wife comes in the deepening evening of their lives. The DEPRYSTER suit is a sad surprise to friends of that old family.

Wilkes Booth on the Stage.

Rose Coghlan to Play Rosalind in the Open Air in Pittsburg.

A little ripple of disapproval is going through the Rialto on account of the contemplated production of "Abraham Lincoln," a four-act drama by Archie Gordon and McKee Rankin. Several prominent actors declare that the attempt to impersonate John Wilkes Booth on the stage is an insult to America's leading actor, Edwin Booth, inasmuch as it reopens old wounds. They deem the selection of such a subject inadvisable and unneces sary, and many have expressed their reluctance to appear in such a play. The role of John Wilkes Booth has been offered to E. J. Henley. Mr. Henley was promptly advised by friends who have been in this country longer than he has to reject the part. He has consequently sent in his refusal and will not appear in "Abraham Lincoln," although as yet he has no other engagement. Henley's course has been approved. It is quite useless to tell the actors that in dramatizing the episodes of a stirring career Messrs. Gordon and Rankin cannot omit the most sensational incidents. They are very loyal to their leader, Edwin Booth. Even though the public at the present time has seemed inclined to vote Booth as listless and uninspired, the members of the theatrical protession are still loyal.

Miss Rose Coghlan will in all probability Miss Rose Coghlan will in all probability play the part of Rosalind in the Pittsburg "As You Like It." Miss Coghlan was not be wilderingly anxious to repeat her Hoboken experience, but the managers of the enterprise have been running after her with much persistence. At the Hoboken affair she caught a sovere cold, lost five days in the country and expended $100 in the interests of her attire. The cast of the Pittsburg "As You Like It" is made up of people who are good, but hone of them are particularly brilliant. Miss Coghlan will lend a justre to the affair.

Then I got deaf, and got so that I couldn't hear anything. There was a noise in my ears all the time." Mr. Link described it as being similar to escaping steam. I had headaches every morning. "constinued Mr. Link. I had pains on the top of my head and scross my eyes. I was troubled with palpitation of the heart and it would burt me to walk fast Mucus filled my threat whenever I would stoop over, and I was always trying to swallow something. Finally, after trying different doctors and patent medicines that did me no good. I went to Drs. McCoy and Wildman and I'm all right now. All my sickness has gone. I got relief as soon almost as I went under their care." Mr. Link representations and went in the looked as if he felt he had struck by the man were the physicians to go to to be cured of caterrh, and he did.

Tom Hughes, a wealthy ex-miner, temporarily stopping in this city, who lived for twenty-three years in the vicinity of the Salon Basin in Southern California, tells me that there ought to have been no mystery regarding the source of the great lake which has threatened to submerge that entire territory. It comes from the Colorada River which overflows into it every Spring and Summer, he says. The fact that the overflow is greater this year than usual, he ascribes to the unusual rainfall and consequent increased accumulation of snow in the moun-
